

Raging Rivers and Stormy Seas

Make a poster that warns people about polluting the beach and the sea.

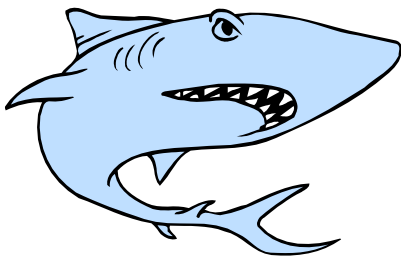

Design the most amazing ice-cream treat. Create a labelled diagram to show your creation, with a description of all the different ingredients.

Imagine you are an underwater explorer. Write a diary entry describing all the amazing things you have seen. Try to use as much detail as possible and add illustrations.

Make a model boat that is powered by the wind. Try it out at home and write down what happened. If you can, take photographs of your floating boat.

Draw a picture of your very own imaginary sea creature. You can add labels showing the different parts of it or write a short description giving extra details.

Cliffs are fantastic places for finding fossils. Create your very own fossil either as a sketch or a model.

Make a list of as many different rivers in England as you possibly can.

Use your art skills to make an underwater scene showing the amazing colours and shapes of life under the rivers and seas.

Write a description of a river or sea creature that you have researched. Make sure you include as much detail as possible and add an illustration.

Invent your very own board game that has an underwater theme. You can make it simple like snakes and ladders or more tricky with cards, forfeits etc.

Draw a map of Great Britain and label the seas that surround it. If you want to repeat this activity for a different country of your choice that would be fantastic.
